P-Noy to lead restaging of transfer of Rizal's bones from Binondo to Luneta

By Michael Lin Ubac and Britta Sander

PRESTIGE Aquino leads the nation in commemorating the 114th anniversary of Jose Rizal's martyrdom by transferring his remains to Luneta Park this morning.

The ceremony includes a symbolic placement of a piece of bone from Rizal's spinal column, which was shattered by a bullet during his execution on Dec. 30, 1896.

The Aquino will lead the ceremonial consecration of the movement of the transfer of Rizal's remains from the house of the national hero's father, Narciso, in Binondo, Manila, to his monument at Luneta Park.

"We encourage everybody to participate and feel the historical moment of laying Rizal to his final resting place," said Aquino. President A. Aquino, commander of the Order of

Hero's last Christmas in 1896 far from merry

By Ameth R. Osampo

OF THE MANY references to Christmas in the five-volume compilation of Jose Rizal's correspondence, the far-fall but early letter dated Dec. 25, 1896, stands out.

From his prison cell in Fort Santiago, Rizal addressed his distant cousin, Luis Tironi de Aranda, with these words:

"I have been waiting for you this morning to speak with you about an important matter, but unfortunately your parents did not permit you to come. If you have time to spare, I should like to speak with you before I appear before the council. I would appreciate it very much, this afternoon, this evening, or (tomorrow) morning."

Malacañang finds 1948 law banning gambling on Rizal Day

TODAY, Dec. 30, is the 114th anniversary of the martyrdom of Dr. Jose Rizal. It is also the centennial of the transfer of the remains of the national hero from Biñan to his monument in Luneta, now called Rizal Park. (See story on this page.)

Rizal was executed in Bagumbayan at exactly 7:03 in the morning of Dec. 30, 1896. An hour later, a wagon from San Juan de Dios Hospital carried the corpse to the Reco Cemetery where it was secretly buried in an unmarked grave. In the afternoon of the same day, Narciso, a brother sister and confidante of Rizal, found her brother's grave after a long search. She asked the guards to allow a marble slab to mark the site. Inscribed on the marker were the letters "RIZO," Rizal's last name pronounced

Investment upgrade, faster growth expected

By Tina Arnes-Gonzalez

THE AQUINO government has described 2012 as one of the best years ever for the Philippines with economic growth expected to surpass the targeted 5 to 6 percent and the stock market ending the year on a 38th record high, making it the second best performing market in Asia behind Thailand.

For 2013, promises to be even better, according to the CEOs of some of the country's largest corporations who are already looking forward to even faster economic growth and the Philippines finally getting its investment-grade status, which is expected to pave the way for more foreign investments to pour into the country.

"This year's good economic fundamentals—strong inflation, high foreign exchange reserves and low interest rates—provide a good springboard for a very 2013 outlook. Hopefully this translates into another credit rating improvement that would put the country on investment grade, thereby the Knights of Rizal, which spearheads the program together with the National Historical Commission of the Philippines (NHCP).

"This is the 100th year of the master and devout burial of Rizal and it is important for all Filipinos to know his sacrifice in bringing liberation to the Filipino people," Fernandez said. "The Knights of Rizal and the NHCP will respect the funeral march from Manila's Green to San Francisco Church, where Juan Luna lived in Manila in 1898-1900."

Taking the place of Rizal's remains in the grave of Juan Luna is a replica of the ivory one that remained the family home and was located in a chamber in the 1912 during a commemorative held by the Knights of Rizal and the Manila Lodge of the Philippines.

The site will be converted to a memorial garden administered by the Knights of Rizal wearing a rope of the 1912 and the remains to be interred in the same site.

Around 7,000 students, with police, government employees, and Manila residents will be expected to witness the procession, which will start at 8 a.m. to 5 a.m. from three assembly points: Plaza Luning Luning in Marikina, Fort San Juanico in Marikina, and the Manila Hotel.

According to Malacañang, the day's celebration includes a parade, a religious service, and a

Secret grave

Rizal's body was dropped in an unmarked grave in the old Pan de Azúcar area by the Knights of Rizal. The body was found and buried with a marble slab, on which his name was inscribed in Spanish, "RIZAL".

It was then the Spanish authorities who might return his body to prevent public examination. In 1898, Rizal's remains were kept by his family in the Marikina house until Dec. 26, 1912, when they were transferred to Manila for the remains to be transferred to the Manila Hotel.

Rosales was seen cradling the late scientist's body in his arms. The body was found in a house in Marikina while visiting his parents "Máximo and Dolores".

Rosales said he brought the body to Manila in 1912. He said he was the only one who saw the body and he was the only one who saw the body.

It may be cold, rainy on New Year's Day, says Pagasa

THE FIRST day of 2013 will be cloudy with a chance of showers over most parts of the country, according to a special outlook for the New Year by the weather bureau. No new storm appears to be in sight.

In its past week, the southeast monsoon, known locally as "bagang abang," will remain the persistent weather system affecting most of the country, the Philippine Department of Earthquake and Volcanological Services Administration (Pagasa) said.

"The weather system that will affect most parts of the country are the southeast monsoon (bagang abang) with strong to gale force winds and the tail end of a cold front that will prevail in the last few days," according to the advisory prepared by Pagasa administration National Institute.

The bagang abang as well as typhoon province and the Cordillera Administrative Region, will experience but showers on Sunday but light rain are in preparation from New Year's Day up to the next day, Pagasa said.

"Locally, southern Luzon, eastern Visayas and eastern Mindanao will have scattered rain due to the continued migration of the tail end of cold front on Monday up to Tuesday," said.

The rain will be some 100 to 200 mm, Pagasa said. It will be heavy rain in some areas, but no major flash floods and landslides are expected, the weather bureau added.

The rest of the country will have mostly cloudy to mostly cloudy with passing light rain, it said.

The advisory made no mention of any approaching weather disturbances, and forecasters said they did not expect another tropical cyclone in 2013 after last week's Tropical Storm "Quinta," which resulted in moderate damage in the Visayas.

Going into 2013, the weather bureau and General Lizardo (Pagasa) may be busy for the day, but he said he will be busy with other work as he will be governed by the monsoon, Pagasa said. (A/R)

ALTHOUGH they were small-scale miners until last year, when they were turned into forest guards at the Mt. Magdiwang watershed in San Francisco, Agusan del Sur.

Called the "natural fence" of the watershed's buffer zone at the foot of the mountain, they now lead productive lives working on small parcels of land developed into organic agricultural farms while giving the daunting task of protecting the more than 1,600 hectares watershed from illegal tree cutting and timber poaching.

The program was initiated by the last President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo (PNP) last year, saying small forest small-scale miners who were willing to change their lives by shifting from environmentally destructive livelihood activities into eco-tourism while becoming protection of the forest.

San Francisco was opened from the onslaught of typhoon "Ondoy" which destroyed neighboring provinces, thanks to Magdiwang's natural shield of thick forest.

Under the PNPA's "New Area Program" (NAP), the 100-year-old and well-known, each of the former beneficiaries would be given 10,000 hectares of support, in the divided into small farming development project.

Organic farming

After setting their families within the 100-year-old buffer zone of Magdiwang, the area farmers grow organic vegetables, pine, rice and fruit trees that would sustain their daily subsistence and be freed from the rigors of day-to-day survival as the gold rush starts to weigh heavily on them.

"The situation is no different now because we no longer have to worry about what to eat in our daily lives because we have grown vegetables and other crops from our backyard," said Orlinda Singson, 60, who has eight children.

Singson had been an "abandoned" legal contractor in the months of the gold-rush mining village of Tondo in Baguio and for the next three decades. After Singson Singson, the other program beneficiaries are Isidoro Magdiwang, 57, Wilfredo Alarcon, 58, and Francisco Magdiwang, 60, who were also supported for their transfer of the mountain estate.

Shield vs typhoon

Magdiwang, which is part of Davao province, is important to ensure the neighboring province of Davao del Sur and Compostela Valley was not overwhelmed with a disaster again with a resulting wave storm.

After Singson, PNPA general manager said that among the targets, only Magdiwang has about 50 percent of forest area—good enough to protect residents from any typhoon.

In 1997, the water agency started a major rehabilitation program covering at least 920 hectares of damaged and open grounds of Magdiwang after it was declared a watershed forest reserve by Presidential Proclamation No. 240. The program has brought more than enough supply of water to more than 1,000 households.

"In one source alone, we are already up at least 17 percent per second, a significant increase from 1 liter per second to 200," Lemos said.

Five years, he said, the PNPA will "tag more 'natural fence' forests in other areas of the buffer zone still threatened by the increase of illegal logging, small-scale mining, and sand and gravel quarrying.

A Dazzling Christmas for PWDs

From sparkling trees to parties that light up the streets, Christmas has always been known for offering light displays and spectacular colors. This year, the SM Care Program on Disability Affairs brought the wonder and joys of Christmas to young people with disability (PWDs) in the form of a magical light parade entitled "2012 Grand Festival of Lights at the SM Mall of Asia."

The parade featured grand floats which lit up the streets around the mall, besides the amazing displays of lights and colors. The floats were also accompanied by dancers and performers, adding even more entertainment to the festive occasion. And while some children with visual impairments might not have been able to fully appreciate the lights, the beauty of Christmas was not lost on them as they roared in love and laughter that filled the area as the event progressed. After the parade, they were also treated to a special fireworks display held at SM by the Bay, cheering, cheering and remembering from the colorists. The event also served to increase the awareness of the community.

SM has strived to make all of its malls sensitive to the needs of PWDs by addressing various accessibility concerns and by having its staff force and teams are how to handle differently-abled customers. It also continuously finds ways and means to make every SM Supermall a second home for them.

New Year, new hope for fire victims

Medium-rise housing program to benefit over 7,000 homeless residents

By Kristine Felton Mangunay and Maribel B. Polanco

CELEBRATING the coming of the New Year is the last thing on Wilfredo Dizon's mind.

Awake from losing a loved one, he and his family were among the more than 7,000 residents who were left homeless on Christmas Day in San Juan City after a fire that reached the general alarm engulfed hundreds of shanties in Barangay St. Joseph and Isabela.

"I have no figure yet where we're going to stay [celebrating the New Year] is not a priority for me," Dizon, whose father Wilfredo Jr. was among those killed in the fire, said the house in an area in the general alarm of Barangay St. Joseph.

The family and others are currently seeking shelter in the area and in other evacuation centers in the city.

The San Juan City government, however, said it was planning a medium-rise housing project for the fire victims.

Mayor Sola Gomez said in a statement his bureau's department has sent out the affected residents that the social team is a group that would develop the medium-rise program.

"We are going to turn on the Agency Task Force which will lay down all the plans, mechanisms and programs regarding the implementation of our in-city medium-rise housing not only for them but also for the other low-income families," she added.

According to Gomez, work on developing the housing will be done in a systematic manner on the basis of the fire victims in San Juan, which will begin once the area is cleared.

"Once the debris is cleared from the site, the land will be surveyed and subdivided according to whatever plan the task force will agree upon," she said.

She added that the affected families that are displaced would be built into the housing project to prevent another fire from breaking out or spreading out of control.

"We will give emphasis to national roads, sewerage, water supply, and other basic services, and proper electrical and water facilities to avoid similar tragedies in the future," Gomez said.

100 Malabon families lose homes in fire

By Kristine Felton Mangunay

ONLY days after a fire gutted hundreds of homes in San Juan City on Christmas Day, another one broke out in a short time, this time in Malabon City, leaving around 100 families homeless for the New Year.

Chief Insp. Rodrigo Reyes, Malabon fire marshal, said the blaze that broke out at 3:15 a.m. in the house of Nicolas Rios in Barangay Bantay Bantay in Barangay "Nagay" after left two people injured. Rios and his wife were injured. Rios and his wife were injured.

According to PFI Kirby Sanguin, one of those who rushed to the scene, Sanguin said the fire broke out in the house of Nicolas Rios in Barangay Bantay Bantay in Barangay "Nagay" after left two people injured. Rios and his wife were injured.

Meanwhile, the fire department said it was helping authorities during the night.

According to Reyes, the fire spread quickly to adjacent houses since these were all made of light materials.

While the cause of the fire has yet to be determined, Reyes said it may be due to the fire victims who were sleeping in the house.

Reyes said the fire victims were sleeping in the house when the fire broke out.

He added it was a good thing there was a partition between the group of houses and a chimney in the area.

It was not for the partition, the fire may have become bigger because of the partition, Reyes said.

The fire was declared out at 5:30 a.m. Reyes said the fire victims were sleeping in the house when the fire broke out.

Mayor Sola Gomez said it was planning a medium-rise housing project for the fire victims. Gomez said it was planning a medium-rise housing project for the fire victims.

"My dad is a home right now. My family and I have nowhere to go," Dizon, a resident of Bantay, said the house.

He said that while he has accepted the fact that he will be sleeping in an evacuation center for the New Year, he was hoping to stay in the house.

US renews warrantless surveillance act

WASHINGTON—The United States Senate approved a five-year extension Friday of a George W. Bush-era surveillance law that allows US spy agencies to conduct wiretapping on foreign citizens without consent.

The Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA), approved by the House of Representatives on September 16, passed the Senate with a 75-20 vote and broad bipartisan support, and now goes to President Barack Obama for his signature.

Lawmakers also drew their attention to the need to address attempts to limit eavesdropping and privacy safeguards to the elements of FISA that authorize the warrantless wiretapping program that was begun under Bush, without congressional authorization, after the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks.

The law allows the collection of intelligence on Americans when they communicate abroad with foreigners designated as potential threats, says the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency.

Some critics have raised concerns that the continuation of warrantless Americans may be getting away with a vast database collection of phone calls and e-mails.

FISA was first passed in 1978 in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal, when lawmakers acted on concerns about the widespread abuse of government wiretapping and threats of intelligence-gathering practices used as cover-ups.

They lowered safeguards to prevent against subsequent wiretapping of US citizens.

But those safeguards were raised after 9/11 as that intelligence agency could target foreign targets, including in 2006 near the end of Bush's presidency. AP

Bush's health 'improving'

WASH DC—A leading newspaper says it says that former United States President George W. Bush, who has been hospitalized for more than a month, continues to improve, but remains in intensive care at a Texas hospital. "The prognosis is good, as always, in good spirits—and so are we," says a spokesman with doctors and nurses on duty, saying "Early optimism that Mr. Bush will be able to leave the hospital is realistic." Bush's condition is the most serious of his career, but he is expected to be discharged by late September.

Berlusconi agrees to divorce settlement

ROME—Former Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi has agreed to pay his ex-wife, Veronica Berlusconi, 100,000 euros (110,000 dollars) a day as part of a divorce settlement. The daily Corriere della Sera said on Friday that the newspaper said the 50 million euro a year settlement, reached after three years of negotiations, was tied to a lawsuit filed by Berlusconi's ex-wife. The report comes shortly after Berlusconi's return to his home country to lead the center-right campaign ahead of an election in February. Later, a former wife who was married to Berlusconi for more than 22 years, asked for a divorce from the 59-year-old politician in 2008, among her divorce settlement with a 17-year-old girl. AP

New Delhi braces for more unrest

NEW DELHI/SINGAPORE—A woman whose gang rape sparked protests and a national debate about violence against women in India died of her injuries on Saturday, prompting a security lockdown in New Delhi and an acknowledgment from India's prime minister that social change is needed.

Reacting to a new wave of protests, Indian authorities closed thousands of police, closed 13 universities and banned television news coverage in the hours of New Delhi, where demonstrators have converged since the attack to demand improved women's rights. Hundreds of people staged peaceful protests in a demonstration on Saturday morning.

The 22-year-old medical student, severely beaten, raped and thrown out of a moving bus in New Delhi two weeks ago, had been seen in Singapore in a critical condition by the Indian government on Thursday for medical treatment.

The intense media coverage of the attack and the use of social media to galvanize the protests, mostly by young middle-class students, has forced political leaders to confront some uncomfortable truths about the treatment of women in the world's largest democracy.

Most women in India go unreported, many offenders go unpunished, and the attack of parliament drew attention to social activists who say that corrupt governments have done little to protect the safety of women.

"The need of the hour is a comprehensive debate and reform in the criminal justice system," said a senior politician in a critical condition by the Indian government on Thursday for medical treatment.

agencies to help all students and the use of social media to galvanize the protests, mostly by young middle-class students, has forced political leaders to confront some uncomfortable truths about the treatment of women in the world's largest democracy.

The body was taken to a Hindu temple in Singapore for cremation. Indian diplomats ordered a gold and yellow cloth to be transported for her body to be cremated in India, said an Indian official.

"We are very sad to report that the student passed away peacefully at 4:41 a.m. on Friday. Her family and friends from the High Commission Embassy of India were by her side," said a spokesman for the High Commission Embassy of India.

Police Chief Minister, Moha Dikshit, said the woman's death was a "tragic incident" but was not just a case of violence but also a case of social change. AP

Burma OKs new media reforms

MANAGONGGI—Burma's parliament will allow private daily newspapers from April next year, the government announced on Friday. A big step forward for a country that has been a long time in the process of reforming its media.

Before the military seized power in a 1962 coup, there were more than 100 private newspapers in multiple languages. At present, only one controlled newspaper, mostly controlled by the government, is allowed to publish news.

"We can say it is the beginning of the third and final stage of the media reform in the country," a senior government official told Reuters, adding he was not named.

"We will accept applications for licenses and I expect there will be about 100 private newspapers," he said. The decision comes as part of an ambitious program of law reforming the media in Burma, among the most restrictive regimes in the world. AirAsia opens doors to Taipei

TAIPEI—AirAsia is opening more doors for overseas Filipino workers as well as tourists this holiday season by offering low-cost flights to Singapore and Thailand/Chiang Mai, Singapore.

According to Maan Himmawan, AirAsia CEO in the Philippines, the move is not only intended to provide low fares at USD 40/flight on an direct route to the Philippines.

A joint venture between Philippine-based Himmawan, Singapore-based and Michael Himmawan, and Malaysia's AirAsia International Ltd., AirAsia in the Philippines now provides two weekly flights to Taipei and daily flights to Singapore. The airline's flying frequency is twice K200.

Low-cost carrier from the Philippines has enjoyed the number of Filipinos working in Singapore at 171,000, while some 300,000 work in Taiwan.

"Taipei is very important route for us right now. We are the only airline flying this route right now," says Himmawan.

She points out that many OFWs in Taiwan come from Northern and Central Taiwan, making Clark an ideal hub for their flights.

Illustrating that they are committed to serving the underserved, which is why the airline is based in Clark. She explains that, by flying out of Clark International Airport, the airline can offer lower fares compared with the Noy AirAsia International Airport.

"There has been a lot of traffic and the airline has not been able to handle it," she says, adding that the airline is still negotiating with the airport.

Meanwhile, Raymond Wang of the Taipei Economic and Cultural Office (TECO) in Manila says that the airline will have low fares in the Philippines.

More than that, he says, the new route will encourage Filipinos to visit Taiwan.

Wang says that he made it easier for tourists to apply for visas in Taiwan.

"Not only to our office, but also to the home and get just with the next day," he says.

On the other hand, he says, the airline is not a big factor in the Philippines.

At the airport, he says, the airline is not a big factor in the Philippines.

Top exec sets his heart in Shell Foundation

By Tina Reyes-Durao

CESAR A. Basmura has more prestigious awards than most executives now making the helm of the country's largest corporations.

He is a Management Man of the Year winner of the Management Association of the Philippines, Outstanding Professional in Engineering awarded by the Professional Engineers' Committee, Outstanding Fellowships in the field of business according to the Philippine Fulbright Foundation, and a recipient of the Centennial Award as one of the Top 100 Alumni Engineering Council, alumni of the University of the Philippines.

And the list goes on, much to the envy of other executives.

But the role that renders a real sense of fulfillment for Basmura is founding chair of the Philippine Shell Foundation, Inc., the social development arm of the Shell companies in the Philippines that just celebrated its 50th year of responding to the country's development needs.

The 62-year-old, who still picks a full schedule, including a round of golf three times a week, says that seeing how far the foundation has gone and still being involved in its operations give him more than enough reason to keep on going. Instead of just staying home.

"That's in my blood," declares Basmura, who established his career at Shell in 1956, rising to become its first Filipino CEO and chair in 1975. He held the position until he retired in 1986. He stayed on as non-executive chair until 2000, but remains a director of Philippine Shell Petroleum Corp.

According to Basmura, the foundation was born in 1962 out of a dire need of Filipino entrepreneurs for skilled workers.

"There was a kind of a pessimism at that time. There were a lot of people graduating, but there were no jobs waiting for them. There were disputes with no skills and could not find employment," says Basmura, who, like on the other hand, companies badly needed skilled workers. So, we said, why not put up a foundation to address our needs?"

With an initial endowment of $5 million, Shell implemented the Bayanihan (BAY-ni-an) program, that provided moral-ethical youth with employable skills as well as values formation.

"We worked out a curriculum to teach out-of-school youth and help them become workers, mechanics, electricians, electricians, among others. We also had values formation for them, but not only did they learn the skills, they also developed the right attitude," says Basmura, who has five children, including one who is making a name in the hardware sector.

The 2002 program initiated

BULNANTHATA, the first Filipino CEO of the Shell group in the Philippines, was always around for the foundation's projects.

one of the banner programs of the foundation. In a span of over 50 years, Basmura says, over 5,000 young Filipinos have received skills training. Some have gone on to work for large companies, while a good number have gone abroad.

"Some have become plant managers because we did develop some very good people. There were a lot of applicants, but we really selected those with the right attitude and good potential. I am happy that the program is still there and so much relevant," says the 50th Anniversary chairman.

Basmura also takes pride in the Bayanihan (BAY-ni-an) program, which helps the youth learn moral and social production skills to face entrepreneurs.

"During our travels we saw that there were a lot of opportunities from very low skills, so we developed a program on agriculture. It was not directly related to Shell, but I felt that there were some things that needed to be done. The young had to be trained for something that an employer can be absorbed to white-collar jobs, and agriculture had to be developed," explains Basmura, who was made Honorary Officer of the Order of the British Empire in 1991 by Queen Elizabeth II.

His method of employing business skills and techniques to solve social problems will be the subject of succeeding projects of the foundation over the next 50 years.

Basmura says the desire to improve the implementation of existing programs and the search for the next big initiative keep him fired up and ready to go any day, even to be already too busy to handle full on management of the Basmura and Basmura Financial Services.

"I am still very much interested in doing a lot of things. Eventually I will get to the point where I am already in the line for that," says Basmura.

Prose, poetry and the Apo Mabini parade project

Gilda Candera

FOREVER $1

PROSE AND poetry are such different disciplines. Poetry like so finger, no ear, to sit by the wayside spinning metaphors. Prose like words, too, but number on the mirror itself. Prose is more interested in telling the story, in bringing the tale to its conclusion. A darning of metaphors is good enough, too many will distract.

That's why I'd rather print, for me it's more easier than writing a poem. If so, then, there are those who are adept at both fiction and poetry. They are few.

Poets can always tell when a prose writer is trying to hard to write a poem, the same way that fiction writers can detect a poet trying to hard to tell a story. Both are talents of love, but the talents cannot learn to hide subtle signs of heartache.

Aside (temporarily) writing to my children's school application. They are no amateur poets. As interested in getting their hearts straight than they sometimes forget their syntax or their spelling (Och). That's okay, because when I look at their essays, I know they really don't get anything straight, except maybe the punctuation.

In recent decades, there has been an attempt to combine the two forms. University of the Philippines (UP) professor Jay Fajardo taught "creative nonfiction," which means a fictional story with the art of fiction. These include prose poems (I like get its definition). There is the graphic novel that may have been invented by Neil Gaiman. It tells the tale of his marriage, a farewell away from the comic book.

I would ask Dr. Joven Cuanang—what are crazy friends for—to host a parade of embellished wheelchairs at St. Luke's Global

Coming from the relative ease of writing prose, I decided I want to see a play to write. Well, I do. Mrs. Cuanang's character. Since I couldn't negotiate for those rights of mine, my school chair had to be dressed about as well as I can by those messy girls. I like like Apollinaire's Method, but also like a poem.

ZERO DARK THIRTY: WHY THE FILM'S MAKERS SHOULD BE DEFENDED AND WHAT DEEPER BIN LADEN CONTROVERSY HAS BEEN STIRRED

COOL Hollywood DC Dec. 20, 2012 The greatest of people in Washington... the CIA, and powerful intelligence agency. Zero Dark Thirty is largely centered around one controversy: whether or not physically and mentally torturing detainees used by the intelligence had succeeded in procuring information leading to the whereabouts of Osama bin Laden. (Insert photos of bin Laden in Washington including U.S. Senators Dianne Feinstein, Karl L. Carl Levin (Mich.), and John McCain (Ariz.), who together represent the Senate Intelligence Committee last week took a hard stand against "Zero Dark Thirty" and CIA's efforts to use "enhanced" techniques of interrogation to have obtained from captured al Qaeda operatives as the result of waterboarding and other means of torture and extreme physical abuse.)

Like the rain and the sun, the CIA, and powerful intelligence agency. Zero Dark Thirty is largely centered around one controversy: whether or not physically and mentally torturing detainees used by the intelligence had succeeded in procuring information leading to the whereabouts of Osama bin Laden. (Insert photos of bin Laden in Washington including U.S. Senators Dianne Feinstein, Karl L. Fast forward to December 2012 and ask, why would the intelligence community and the Senate Intelligence Committee use such tactics to find Bin Laden? One answer is that since Bin Laden and his group made their move, the intelligence community could have come to recognize that an even admission that waterboarding or other internally illegal means of procuring information about bin Laden's whereabouts could make the action that the U.S. took against him illegal.
